HE OLD SHIRES ARE IN PERIL
The Dances advance, burning thatch and bushel
The cry goes up, 'Death to the Witch!'

The iron rails of industry smash through leaf and lane

The air raid signal shatters the night

Darkness spreads across the land

But you are here, armed by the Light, to defend the oldest places and forgotten ways

ELAND GAVE THE SWORD! THE Sword gave the Treasure, and the Treasure gave the Law. It's as natural as an oak growing.

WELCOME TO THE HEDGEROW

CHECKE CONTRACTOR OF THE SECOND OF THE SECON

branches and leaves, you find yourself in a new world and a different time. The big factory outside Thornyford is gone, replaced by open fields, crisscrossed with stone walls and hedgerows. Thorny ford is only a village, but you can see the village green and the church beside it.

There's quite a crowd there, men in steeple hats and women in dark dresses and shawls. A minister is speaking and the crowd cheers. His words drift over on the breeze: "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live..."

Someone has built rickety gallows on the patch of land where the railway station will one day stand. There are prisoners in a line with nooses round their necks. Three prisoners, all of them women. One of them painfully familiar to you.

"Come on," your companion says, "we have to put a stop to this - now!"

HOW to PASS THROUGH the HEDGEROW

Through the Hedgerow is a fantasy roleplaying game (RPG) in which you take on the role of magical adventurers who travel through time, visiting the woodlands, fields, villages, and towns of the Old Shires to oppose evil forces at work in history.

A roleplaying game is a type of shared storytelling carried out around a table or online. One player takes on the responsibility of being the Judge, creating the adventure, acting out the parts of the inhabitants of the Old Shires (the Non-Player Characters or NPCs) and imposing challenges. The other players (normally two to four, but sometimes more) each create a fantastic persona – a Player Character (PC) – who inhabits this world, reacts to its challenges, and makes dramatic decisions.

These PCs might be ordinary humans caught up in a magical adventure. They might be wizards or immortal warriors. Others might be magical Fays who protect humanity: headless trolls, shape-changing birds, and multi-armed spider-people.

The Old Shires are an imagined piece of the British countryside in the Dark Ages where King Alfred battles the Vikings, the 17th century with its Civil Wars and witch trials, the 19th century of industry and revolution, and the early 1940s with evacuee children escaping the bombs falling on wartime cities. However, this is your game, and you are welcome to choose other settings to suit your taste - the backwoods of Vermont, the mountains of Provence, or the Sayama Hills outside Tokyo - anywhere steeped in folklore but bypassed by modernity, where the old legends await down any unexpected trail.

Roleplaying games resolve conflict and uncertainty using dice. Through the Hedgerow uses dice that are four-sided (d4), six-sided (d6), eight-sided (d8), twelve-sided (d12), and twenty-sided (d20). You will also need pencils and paper to keep track of what's happening, and you might (optionally) use a pack of cards (page 252) if you want to bring a bit of atmosphere to dramatic moments.

Through the Hedgerow uses an innovative Check & Challenge system (page 71) that encourages players to contribute to the Drama - the unfolding narrative - and that makes wits, charm, imagination, and mysticism as important to overcoming problems as the combat and imagined violence that dominate most RPGs.

THE BRIAR COMPANY of SKY and FURROW

For ages, perhaps forever, two great forces have battled each other - the Light and the Dark. The Light claims to stand for the highest hopes of humanity and civilisation, whereas the Dark tears down those hopes and promotes misery instead. In some centuries, the Light is in the ascendant and humanity flourishes, while in other the Dark destroys everything that people have created.

There are four time periods that make up the major 'fronts' in this war. These are the Mortal Ages, known as the Age of Swords (or Age I, the 9th century), the Age of Plagues (Age II, the 17th century), the Age of Steel (Age III, the early Victorian era), and the Age of Thunder (Age IV, the Second World War).

Into these Ages, the Light sends its champions, known as the Briar Company or the Briar Knights. Some of these are Fays or Otherworldly sorcerers pledged to defend the Mortal Ages, whereas others are ordinary Mortals caught up in a destiny that they do not understand. All possess the Sight - the power to see the supernatural among the everyday.

Briar Knights wander a hedgerow maze, witnessing visions that hint at the mission awaiting them and emerging into one of the Mortal Ages where their help is needed. Perhaps they must rescue a helpless victim or put a stop to a vile plot, uncover a magical treasure or prevent one from falling into the wrong hands. Along the way, they can swear Oaths to help the people they meet, performing little acts of kindness (or mischief) alongside their grand mission.

Things are rarely as they seem, for the countryside is home to older and stranger creatures. The Proud Fay are magical beings loyal to neither Light nor Dark; the Undead hide from the sunlight in barrows and crypts; and the Old Gods, forgotten but still fearsome, maintain their ancient fanes in the whispering woods.

The Dark has its agents too and one faction, known as the Nemesis, quickly becomes aware of the Briar Knights wherever they appear in the Mortal Ages and despatches its forces to hunt them down. The Nemesis is represented by a Nemesis Die that starts small (a d4) but gets larger as the adventure continues, creating more opposition and danger for the Briar Knights. Taking long rests allows the Nemesis Die to grow, so Briar Knights must weigh up the risks of delay or haste.

While Briar Knights can be aggressive trolls or brooding warrior-knights, violence is not the focus of the game. The Check & Challenge system encourages you to use wits and charm to resolve conflicts as an alternative to brawn, pistols, and swords. To succeed in their mission, Briar Knights will need to triumph at Riddle Contests, harvest mystic Herbs, learn ancient Lore, and discover Mythic Sites

ABBREVIATIONS and TERMINOLOGY

A PC is a Player Character (one of the heroes) and an NPC is a Non-Player Character (one of the villains, allies, or 'extras' controlled by the Judge).

You have different dice for different abilities. A small four-sided die (d4) means you are quite ineffective. A six-sided die (d6) is an average sort of ability. An eight-sided die (d8), ten-sided die (d10), or twelve-sided die (d12) are elite abilities. On rare occasions, a superhuman level of ability might be a twenty-sided die (d20).

Initial letters remind you of the identity of the die being rolled and the number is its size: Pd4 is a four-sided Peril Die and DQd6 is a six-sided Doom Quality Die.

ABBREVIATION	DIE	ABBREVIATION	DIE
CQd	Charm Quality Die	Pd	Peril Die
DQd	Doom Quality Die	RSVd	Resolve Die
GQd	Gramayre Quality Die	WQd	Wits Quality Die
MQd	Might Quality Die	VQd	Virtue Quality Die

Dice and powers become Exhausted, which means you can't use them again. Later, they are Restored, making them available to be used once more.

Burning a Die means it gets a size smaller. You can Refresh a Die that has previously been Burned, growing it back one size. Fully Refreshing a Burned Die returns it to its starting size.

If a Die Shrinks, it gets smaller, but only for a single roll. After the roll, the Die goes back to its previous size. If a Die is Boosted, it gets a size bigger for one roll only.

Retreating a Die means permanently Shrinking it by one size - you cannot Refresh a Retreated Die back to its previous size. Advancing a Die means permanently increasing it by one size.

If a Die Retreats/Burns/Shrinks below a d4 it becomes a do - if a roll is required, it is considered to produce a result of '1'. If a Die Advances or Boosts past d12, it produces a Complete Success - however, the Judge might decide to roll a d20.

There are two mechanics used in Through the Hedgerow to resolve uncertainty. An Outcome Check (or simply a 'Check,' see page 71) involves rolling one Die with the aim of matching or exceeding the score on another Die in order to avoid some unpleasantness. A Challenge (page 72) involves rolling one or more Dice and picking the highest score; this reduces the Resolve (RSV) you lose in the attempt; if you still have RSV left at the end of a Challenge, you have achieved some measure of Success.
